

Equality for Women

Do you think women are equal to men? Well, I do. My dream is one day women and men will be treated equally. First, women should have just as much education as men. Also, they should have fair pay at any job they have. Lastly, everything that is accessible to men, women should have access to. Equality for women!

Girls should have all the opportunities possible to get an education. This is not the case in all places. For example, in some places it's illegal for girls to go to school. Also, in certain countries girls are forced to get married instead of getting an education. Next, in parts of the world other than the U.S. women are only allowed to study for certain jobs such as teachers or secretaries. Like Cesar Chavez, I am willing to fight for my dream.

I want women to have their fair payment while doing a job. Sometimes a man and a woman will do the same job and the man will get paid more. Women have to take unpaid months while on maternity leave, and it is impossible for them to work while dealing with their maternal responsibilities. In addition, the types of jobs women are expected to do are paid less than the types of jobs men are expected to do. Historically, people have protested in support of this cause just like Cesar Chavez protested for what he wanted. My belief is that if we tell people what we think, we can help change the world.

Finally, women should be able to access everything men can. For example, women were just recently allowed to fight in the army. Also, in many sectors of society, men are more likely to be promoted to leadership roles. Lastly, in some parts of the world, women are not allowed to leave the house by themselves. Plus, they aren't allowed to learn how to drive. Unfair!

All in all, I think that women are equally as good as men and should be treated that way. Cesar Chavez supported the same principals of equality and respect in his fight for farmworker rights and I hope that in the future there will be more people like him.
